CONFERENCE

RESEARCH AND INNOVATION IN THE THIRD MILLENNIUM

(Opportunities and challenges for the European Companies)

25th June 2008

(Chamber of Deputies' Conference Hall – Via del Pozzetto 158 – Rome)

The International Consortium Folaris aims at offering to its members, to the communities interested in the evolutions of Research and Innovation, as well as to the European Companies, a time and a place to inform and consider carefully these fundamental issues about development.

In the first part of the meeting the Italian and the European perspectives about Research and Innovation will be respectively compared.

Afterwards a group of international experts will offer their vision of the Research and Innovation reality on each of these following sectors:

Nanotechnologies

Energy

Agricultural and food

Biotechnologies

The conference will deal with the most relevant innovations in these sectors at the start of the third millennium: Research and Innovation are at the basis of a competitive development especially in a phase of huge and fast transformations caused by globalisation and new technologies.

It is fundamental a constant focus on contingent and local situations which require first and foremost the references of the whole global scenario and its evolutions.

In this way the conference aim is to analyse the new changes regarding the Research and Innovation policies and strategies in Italy and in the world according to its speakers and participants.

These new approaches tend to perceive nature and the contents of the new emerging paradigms in the utilisation of intellectual, economic and technological resources of the company: efficiency and creativity, predictability and vision, manufacturing and market technology, debt and risk capital, localism, internationalization and so on.

All these subjects are constant matters of analysis and revisions both by the Programs of the European Commission and the Italian Government together with the other promoters in the world.

This complexity has a dramatic impact on the action of the little and average firms which are a fundamental sector of the European economic network both in terms of sales and of employed.

In Europe the action of the PMI is undoubtedly going to be more and more subscribed and agreed. This fact underlines the importance of nursing understanding and cooperation among the European PMI by the constitution of a network of consortiums aimed by knowledge as recommended by the guide lines of Europe expressed in Lisbon at the beginning of the millennium and as promoted by the Programs of the European Commission.

Knowledge, as basic factor of the European economic development, makes essential a more and more unified action between Universities, public and private Research Institutes, firms, financial services and professional support.

The constant and detailed training on a wide range, multi disciplinarity, emerging new technologies, as nanotechnologies and biosciences, will always have a significant role.

The Corporate Social Responsibility takes here a strategic value to the citizens as individuals and as a community, for the modifications and the impact that this is having on the natural and social environment.
